NEW VISION IN HUNGER RELIEF

Project Bread is the state's leading antihunger organization, providing direct help to over more than 49,000 struggling callers through our FoodSource Hotline and raising $3.6 million through The Walk for Hunger. By combining privately donated funds and public funding, we provided more than 430 grants to emergency food programs, schools, summer food programs, neighborhood programs, home health care organizations, and community health centers to help end hunger across the state last year.

Dear Friends:

We took a journey.

Over the past year, Project Bread prepared for our next five-year strategic plan by traveling across the state and gathering information about hunger. We wanted to know if there were solutions that were so local, they couldn't readily be seen, and we wanted to learn if the two big solutions, emergency food and SNAP (food stamps), were working well.

We cast the net wide. In groups and individually, we interviewed over 300 community leaders, parents, teenagers, seniors, free clinic patients, young single mothers, union members, retail grocery workers, antihunger leaders, pioneers from the emerging system of local and sustainable agriculture, and experts in health, economics, and public health.

We heard many personal stories of need but also stories of resilience and mutual help. We met families who were very skilled at coping and managing through hard times. They learned to find help among their friends, family, and community — and they were willing to give help when asked.

They ate dinner with friends, they joined a community garden, they made meals ahead and froze them, they looked for help at the local church pantry, they made sure their child enrolled in free breakfast and lunch at school, they clipped coupons and kept an eye out for bargains, they learned to cook "pot luck" style with friends.

The traditional approaches to hunger relief — emergency food programs and enrollment in SNAP and other federal nutrition programs — help many, but not all, hungry people. The key message we learned was that there is no one-size-fits-all answer to hunger. We also heard that how people are helped is as important as the help itself. People wanted to become active participants in securing healthy food.

We also heard that the best solutions have a triple bottom line — first, they provide help in the short term to alleviate hunger; second, they invest in and strengthen the community, and third, they provide solutions that are sustainable over the long term.

People wanted the food they feed their children to be local, fresh, healthy. They wanted to talk to us about expanding community gardens, healthy school food, farmers' markets, urban agriculture, community suppers, food co-ops, and market-based solutions. They wanted a hand up not simply a hand out; they wanted to work for their food, and they wanted the solutions to be located in their own community.

Clearly the time has come to expand the framework of hunger relief beyond its current boundaries of food distribution. While we continue to protect emergency food programs for those in urgent need, we will also look to invest in the growing number of emerging programs that allow low-income people to help themselves.

At Project Bread, we have embarked on a bold new vision of hunger relief. The new vision is not separate from the food system we all partake in. It's part of it. It teaches a man to fish. It fosters interdependence. It builds community resilience. It supports social capital. It involves local farmers. It empowers people. It feeds people well.

Please join us.

Sincerely,

Ellen Parker
Executive Director

“Project Bread continues to be a community builder for Boston — it partners with neighborhoods who are trying to create a better place with fewer hungry people. It is not just a hand out, but a hand up, because Project Bread believes in leadership. The greatest humanistic and historical task of the antihunger movement is to help the hungry feed themselves.”

“We’re feeding folks. The largest group we’ve had this year is through the food pantry. With our afternoon meals, we serve elders. There, our goal is to keep the meals very healthy. Food is also a vehicle to connect volunteers to seniors. We have an early morning breakfast for homeless men — they’re suffering from health problems, so we serve healthy food to them, too. Project Bread is the single largest supporter of all of these programs.”

Project Bread partners with 28 community health centers throughout the state to provide emergency food vouchers, screen for food insecurity, and connect pediatric patients with needed food resources.

The 2012 Walk for Hunger Campaign Associates, who help organize the Walk, participated in an outreach day last spring at the Pine Street Inn. There they completed tasks in the kitchen ranging from chopping onions to making sandwiches. ## Working to End Hunger

The following organizations received grants from Project Bread through its Walk for Hunger and through foundation and corporate support during the 2011 – 2012 funding period. They include emergency food programs, schools, summer food programs, non-profit farms, subsidized Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) programs, Chefs in Schools, food banks, food rescue programs, community gardens, and farmers' markets.

Addressing the needs of frail, homebound seniors, Project Bread partners with elder home-care organizations in Boston and provides food vouchers, which enables visiting case workers to fill their clients' pantries with needed food. Partner agencies distributed 71 vouchers to elders in 2012.

Kristina Zontini, volunteering at the Pine Street Inn

“Nobody is denied a meal here. I think this is important because so many people aren’t given the extra chance they need, and the Pine Street Inn offers that opportunity at a critical time for individuals.”

— Kristina Zontini, 2012 Walk for Hunger Campaign Associate

Project Bread 2011 Statement of Activities

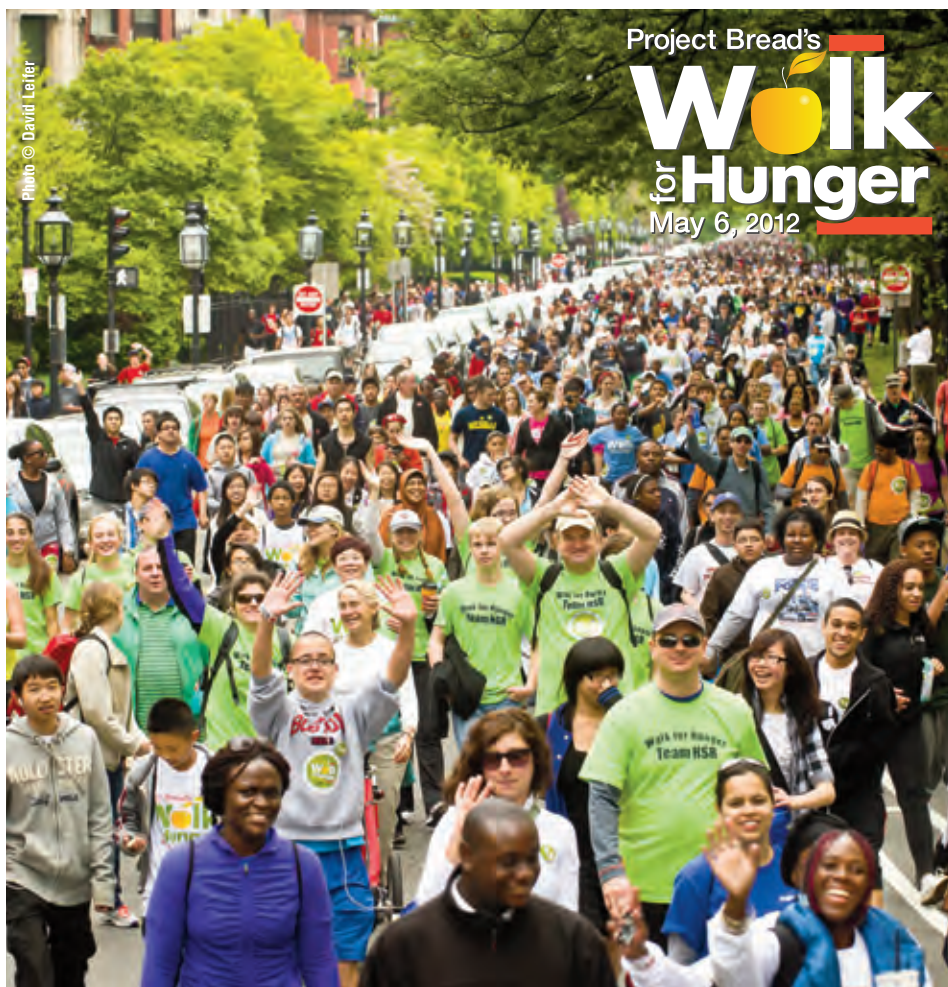

Over the past eleven years, Project Bread has allocated eighty percent of the organization’s expenses directly to help the hungry through community food grants and hunger prevention programs, and twenty percent to support Project Bread’s fundraising and administrative efforts. The Charitable Bureau of the Better Business Bureau has determined that a “reasonable use of funds requires that total fundraising and administrative costs not exceed fifty percent of total income.” We are very proud of our achievement in relation to this standard.

Because of the extraordinary support Project Bread receives from the community through generous donations of time, goods, and services, we are able to keep our overhead expenses low. As a result, those who give to Project Bread know that the money they contribute goes where it is needed most . . . to feed the hungry.

Mrs. Kuecker with her granddaughter, Lauren, at the 2012 Walk for Hunger

“I look forward to the Walk every year because I always leave feeling inspired. The fact that so many people get up early, give up their free time, and come to help others amazes me. It seems that on this one day, Boston really is a small town — a community made up of all kinds of people who care about others and are willing to do something about it.”

Leadership Circle

Project Bread's Leadership Circle is comprised of a special group of individual donors who make an extra commitment to those facing hunger in Massachusetts. Their generosity has helped make it possible to provide lifesaving support to hunger relief programs throughout the state. They also made it possible for Project Bread to research and develop innovative community solutions to end hunger. This list acknowledges gifts made between June 1, 2011, and May 31, 2012.

Grants and Foundations

Project Bread gratefully acknowledges grant and foundation awards made by the following organizations between June 1, 2011, and May 31, 2012.

“Project Bread continues to invest in summer food programs, because summer is a crucial time for children to grow, socialize, and learn in preparation for the next school year. We know that when children and teens get a healthy breakfast and lunch at a summer site, their parents have more money for a nutritious evening meal.”

Arbella employees at the 2012 Walk for Hunger

Each year Project Bread relies on our business friends to assist in our efforts to end hunger in Massachusetts. We wish to express our appreciation to the corporations, corporate foundations, and organizations listed below, which provided financial contributions and supported the efforts of their employee Walkers, Volunteers, and donors. This list reflects gifts made between June 1, 2011, and May 31, 2012, including Walk team contributions and matching gifts.

“The Walk for Hunger is a tradition in Boston and now, in our 5th year, it has become a tradition for Arbella. I am proud of the Arbella Team that is 495 strong and has raised more than $64,000. Our employees, with their family and friends, are energized by coming together to walk to support this important cause of helping our neighbors.”

Heart & Sole Walkers

“Being a flour miller and being very community minded, Bay State Milling is a strong advocate for Project Bread and they have been actively supporting the Walk for several years through our team called the Whole Wheat Winners. It was a great opportunity for me to get re-engaged in the Walk and have a team to do it with and to raise funds together through a variety of activities besides walking.”

Heart & Sole Walkers

Heart & Sole Walkers are a group of dedicated participants who raise a minimum of $500 for each Walk. In 2012, Heart & Sole Walkers raised $1.5 million to relieve and eliminate hunger in Massachusetts.

Gerald Missal at Project Bread's Appreciation and Grant Award Ceremony

“When my two daughters were in school, we walked as a family with some other families. After they graduated and went off to college, I stopped walking for a while. Then I realized how much it meant to me and started up again on my own. I have loved doing it every year since.”

— Gerald Missal, Heart & Sole Walker who has raised over $25,000 over the past 20 years

“I walk with friends and family. It’s a great opportunity to spend time together where you have nothing to do but walk and talk! I invite friends and family to walk with me. Some walk the first half, some the second half, so I have company for the whole 20 miles.”

— Nathaniel Woodward, Heart & Sole Walker who has walked since 2004 and has raised nearly $17,000 for hungry people

2011-2012 Board of Directors

McCarron, Project Bread board member; Bonita Cuff, Witness to Hunger; (Front row) Kacey Pohlad, Project Bread board member; Juell Frazier, Witness to Hunger; Tamara Santiago, Witness to Hunger; Ellen Parker, executive director of Project Bread – The Walk for Hunger

We gratefully acknowledge the unflagging support and inspired vision of our board of directors.

“What a noble cause, to try to end hunger in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Most of us wake up every day and either open a cabinet, fridge, or freezer, and we have choices. Choices. There are people who open up those same doors and see nothing, not one thing. Where we have a choice, they have a challenge.”

— The Honorable Robert E. Travaglini, speaking at the 2012 Walk for Hunger Kickoff Breakfast

2012 Board of Directors

We gratefully acknowledge the unflagging support and inspired vision of our board of directors.

Board member Ronald E. Kleinman, M.D.

“Project Bread in every community might be a simple solution to hunger in America.”

— Ron Kleinman, M.D., Physician-in-Chief, Chair, Department of Pediatrics, MassGeneral Hospital for Children, a member of Partners Healthcare, and Chair of Project Bread’s 2012–2013 Board of Directors

Jean McMurray with her niece, Neve Palmieri, and sister Julie McMurray, at the 2012 Walk for Hunger

“Hunger is an issue of social justice. Project Bread understands this and leads the way in mobilizing concerned citizens to transform a shared vision of healthy food for every child and adult in Massachusetts into a reality.”
